When the devastating world war broke out and began engulfing almost the entire European continent in the red flames of war in its cruellest and most destructive forms, the people of this great American republic from humanitarian instincts alone, immediately began to band themselves together in many organizations for the Christian purpose of rendering aid and succor in such places and to such innocent, defenseless peoples whose abilities to help themselves were rendered hopelessly inadequate and unavailing. The result was when the cry went up from ravished, death-stricken Belgium for the necessities with which to keep soul and body together in the little children and aged and infirm non-combatants of the land, America and Americans rushed instantly to the rescue, that great American Herbert Hoover was selected to succor the nation in distress and thanks to his genius as an organizer, the admiral Belgian Relief Commission was formed and the tireless activities of this admirable body of efficient American executives and the generous bounty of our citizens rescued a whole people from starvation.

As the flood of war engulfed other lands and other nations additional organizations were formed and additional contributions generously made to all corners with America's usual prodigality for things and occasions worth while. Roumania, Serbia, Greece, Bulgaria, Armenia, and every other land and people in turn were given aid as their wants became pressing and were made known while the ravaged provinces of Russia, Galicia, Poland, and the Ukraine were recipients of our bounty in adequate measure.

Then, too, as human liberty was shaken to its foundations by the victorious hun hordes and this young giant nation of the New World was forced to enter the conflict that right might triumph and international obligations be respected by all nations, even more organizations were created to bear the burden of supporting our own soldier boys in some comfort at least in training camp and on the battlefields of Europe. In all of these different organizations and demands no class of people throughout this broad land responded with more generosity or alacrity than did our Jewish people; no demand for aid in the alleviation of suffering anywhere met with a deaf ear when the Jewish citizen was approached and wherever they were found their names not unlike the storied Abou Ben Adhem either led the list or were very near the top.

During all of this time the native lands and peoples of these same Jewish citizens were being visited by the furies of war in its cruellest forms and in addition to the burdens assumed by their response to appeals for aid for the common good these people with that God-given loyalty to race which stands out as one of the very strongest points of character in the Jewish race, these generous people were called upon year after year to extend aid and relief to their own starving fellows. Despite the many millions annually contributed by the wealthy Jews of this and other countries distress has continued to grow among the Jewish people and today of the 12,000,000 Jews in Poland and Russia at least one-half that number or 6,000,000 men, women and children are literally starving to death.

Again has the appeal been made to big-hearted, Christian America for food and clothing for the starving and naked. Will that appeal be made in vain? Will the richest people of the richest and most favored country under God's sun fail to respond or to give in His name at this time, when the need was never so urgent? We say No, a thousand Noes.

It is estimated that $35,000,000 are needed of us for the immediate and permanent relief of these starving Jews and American and Americans are going to make good that amount. Every organization created for war work during the past five years has been re-created for this final and more pressing need and drive and the soliciting campaign which starts next Monday will seek to raise $35,000 in this county or $25,000 outside of the DuBois district. The solicitors will visit all industrial plants Monday and each employee will be asked to contribute $1.00. That sum is not much in itself, but it may be the means of saving a little child or an aged man or woman from starvation. Think of the possibilities and give in the name of humanity.

A Call To Christian America

That the United States is a Christian nation is a statement which is often made though, aside from the fact that the majority of its people are baptized in that faith and are buried under its ceremonial, there are often times when some great big Christian work is needed to demonstrate that we have the Christian spirit as well as the title.

Christianity is Love. Love is Charity. Lacking in Charity we can have no Love and where Love is dead there can be no Christianity.

Christianity and Judaism alike practice the principles of Love and Charity. In this respect at least they are similar. Both have contributed largely to charitable institutions and charitable causes. Along with the church and the synagogue have come hospitals and institutions of learning. Forward they have marched in the path of Progress. Christian and Jew join hands in the furtherance of great humanitarian projects disregarding creed and race.

Here in Clearfield county we doubt if there is a Christian church which has not, at some time or other, accepted the gifts of Jewish business men. Rarely does the solicitor meet with refusal when a paper is presented to them. Aside from his support of Christian churches his gifts to hospitals and other worthy institutions have been numerous, freely given and generous. We have found him a good citizen.

The time is here when Christian Americans have the opportunity of proving their Christianity. Christianity itself does not need to be proven but the individual Christian needs the test applied quite often. Love of brother men, charity to all, are Christian tenets. Ministering to the sick, caring for the dying and help for the afflicted is the work laid out by the Master. Sacrifice is the price which a true Christian will pay.

From the Far East comes the call for help. The call is carried by means of the printed word and no Christian, blessed with the ability to read and reason, can escape the consequences of neglecting to read the call and consider the dire need of help.

The call is that of a starving babe; a pitiable wail which is all but stilled by the pangs of starvation, a cry that has already been stilled in thousands of cases by a merciful Death Angel.

The call is that of a frantic mother sitting in squalid surroundings praying that the cry of the little one might be hushed and that she might be spared the agony of seeing her little one pass into the Great Beyond for the need of nourishment.

The call is that of thousands who have been unable to endure this veritable Hell and whose nerves and minds have broken, making of them raving maniacs.

The call is from aged men and women, their sons shot down in war; their homes broken up and not even crusts of bread on which to live.

The call is from GOD who gave the commandments.

The man who cannot hear the cry of the starving babe, the man who is deaf to the entreaties of the frantic mother, the men who cannot respond to the necessities of aged men and women, surely cannot be called a Christian.

A Praying Christian is a handy man at prayer meeting but it is Paying Christians who will put the Jewish Relief Campaign across next week.

Be a Paying Christian when the solicitor calls.

The men who fought to make the world safe for democracy and the Army who served them in their hour of need for a common cause to save the starving children and aged men and women of Eastern Europe, and the purposes of the Jewish War Relief Campaign have now been endorsed by the American Legion in eighteen counties in Western Pennsylvania, including Allegheny county, and by the Salvation Army.

Both the Salvation Army and the American Legion are doing more than give their moral support in this work of humanity and mercy. In Pittsburgh, the Salvation Army is working as a team, soliciting funds with which to save the lives of countless thousands of helpless people. Members of the American Legion have also joined the various teams throughout the district and realize that the war would have been fought in vain if the civilian populations of communities freed from the Hun yoke are to starve, and they have re-enlisted in this struggle, not to take, but to save lives.

There is another organization that is also giving invaluable assistance to the Jewish War Relief Campaign. It is the Junior Red Cross. In Allegheny County, every school chapter has sent to the headquarters of the campaign committee, two of its club members, who have received all advertising signs and posters, and the little fellows have taken it upon themselves to supplement the work of their older brother, and have placed the symbol of charity in every conceivable place. Still another organization has come to the aid of these suffering children across the seas, an organization whose war work proved so invaluable and who brought forcibly to attention the tremendous boy power of the world. The Boy Scouts are helping and everywhere that a scout troop has been organized, is found a troop of workers. Everything that a little boy can do, and to aid this work of mercy, is being performed by the khaki clad lad in Pittsburgh they serve as messengers, as bundle carriers, as bill posters, as advertisement distributors and in every town where there are scout organizations, may be found visible examples of their handiwork.

AMERICAN LEGION SELECTED FIRST SET OF OFFICERS

HAZLEBURG, Oct. 3.—At the session today of the American Legion, the first held by the organization in Pennsylvania, George J. Tyler, of Montgomery county, was elected state commander. Other officers were: Alexander L. Kling, Pittsburgh, first vice; David Spangle, Williamsport, second vice; and Harry C. Blank, Allentown third. Margaret C. Thomas, of Philadelphia, state arbiter; David Farquhar, Westmoreland, and Robert McEldowney, Cameron county, state masters of arms; Rev. Luther Wolf, of Philadelphia, was elected chaplain. Allentown was chosen as the city in which the state convention will convene in 1920. An address by Governor Sproul was one of the features. The convention will adjourn tomorrow after passing on more than a hundred resolutions.

I saw this in The Progress.

CHICAGO WON YESTERDAY

The 1919 World's Series now underway, is attracting more attention throughout the country than any similar event in the last five years.

The bulk of the local fans are rooting for Pat Moran's Cincinnati team to cop the classic, and more than two hundred congregated in the DuSable assembly hall each afternoon to see the game reproduced on the electric score board. Every play is shown just as it occurs on the field, and the "died-in-the-wool" fans root just as hard as though the real diamond was spread out before them.

Chicago copied yesterday's game. Kerr, Chicago's kid pitcher, shut out the National League champs while his team mates put over 3 runs.

The series now stands: Cincinnati 2; Chicago 1.

PHILIPSBURG WINS SERIES

The Philipsburg All-Stars won the deciding game of the nine game series between Philipsburg and Houtzdale at Houtzdale yesterday afternoon. The series consisted of nine games, and the winner received a purse of $1,000. Each side had won four games up to yesterday, and the finish was very exciting, several scraps resulting between the adherents of the two teams.

The score of yesterday's game was Philipsburg, 6; Houtzdale, 4.

A special meeting of the W. S. W. C. T. U. will be held at the home of Mrs. M. J. Bowes, on Nichols street Monday evening.

PRESIDENT HAD MORE REST LAST NIGHT. LITTLE CHANGE NOTICED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4. 1:40 P. M.—Dr. Grayson announced this afternoon that President Wilson's condition remains favorable and that the doctors called into conference with him are of this opinion. Examination of Wilson's eyes made by Dr. W. D. Schweinitz showed there has been no change since the last examination six months ago.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The President had a good night's rest and his condition is more favorable, said a statement issued at 10:55 a. m. today by Dr. Grayson. Joseph R. Wilson, the President's brother, was unable to remain here but is keeping in touch with the White House by telephone. Mrs. Wilson was in the sick room at an early hour today. She rarely leaves her husband's side. Mrs. Wilson is being assisted by two trained nurses. Dr. Grayson who has been showing evidence of worry since the President halted his speaking tour in Wichita last week, seemed more cheerful today than he has been for some time.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Dr. Grayson was at President Wilson's bedside for some time this morning. At this hour an official statement was momentarily expected. It was unofficially stated that the President was about the same. The President is still gravely ill. He showed a slight improvement last evening. Hope was expressed at the White House that this improvement reported by Dr. Grayson last night would mark the turning point in his illness and that he would show more progress today. Dr. Dercum, Philadelphia nerve specialist, was coming to Washington this morning for another consultation with Dr. Grayson and other physicians attending the President. It was emphasized at the White House that no alarm should be felt over Dr. Dercum's visit as it was arranged when he came to the city several days ago that he would come back to Washington for another consultation today.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—President Wilson's illness is expected to put upon his lieutenants in the Senate the responsibility of deciding how much to accept in the way of reservation to the peace treaty. Senators Hitchcock and Swanson must make the decision on reservations else that decision and the ratification of the treaty will be delayed is the belief of some Senators. Leaders expect that within five weeks at the outside the treaty will be decided on.

Hitchcock has steadily declined to discuss reservations or to commit himself in the slightest degree as to how much he will be willing to concede. Former President Taft's latest draft of reservations to Article Ten is in the hands of Senators today.

BARN FIRE AT WOODLAND CALLS OUT LOCAL LADDIES

Old Mooley had a little lung exercise this afternoon when a call for help was received from Woodland where fire broke out in a barn on the property of Arch Devling. There was a quantity of painting materials in the barn and the fire burned so fiercely that it was feared it would spread to nearby buildings. The local department set out for Woodland but the danger was past before they arrived there.

STEEL OPENINGS

NEW YORK.—Opening prices were for the most part higher at the stock market opening today. United States Steel opened at 105 1/4 up 7/8, Baldwin at 135 1/2 up 1 5/8, Cuyahoga at 224, Bethlehem B. at 103 up 5/8, Mexican Petroleum at 226 up 2 1/4, Studebaker at 116 1/2 up 1 1/2.

After twenty-six years of continuous service as postmistress of Decatur, Ga., Mrs. K. W. Kirkpatrick has resigned the office because of the Government age limit of 65 years.

Mrs. Alice Polk Hill, a prominent figure in Denver club and social circles, has been appointed poet laureate of Colorado by Gov. Shoup.

Friday, October 3rd, 1919, bids fair to be remembered by Clearfield members of the Masonic Fraternity for ninety nine years, as that day was yesterday, and last evening formal announcement was made of a substantial gift to Clearfield Lodge No. 311. Clearfield Lodge of Masons, while always in a flourishing condition, does not have a home of its own, and this disadvantage with its ever increasing problems of rentals and the handicap of being unable to fit up the social and lodge rooms in accordance with the tastes of the members, has been a matter of much concern to those who have the welfare of the craft at heart and the future in mind.

A committee composed of P. F. Davis, O. Bruce Porter and R. L. Fulton were authorized to go into the matter of acquiring permanent quarters many months ago. Last evening the committee made a formal report announcing that an option had been had been acquired on the Keystone Building; that the option would be exercised by Mr. A. W. Lee, and the entire third floor leased to the Masonic bodies, at a nominal rental for a period of ninety nine years—this generous arrangement being made by Mr. A. W. Lee, the oldest member of Clearfield Lodge. Needless to say, the proposition made by Mr. Lee was accepted promptly, and with a hearty vote of thanks by the members.

The lodge will immediately take steps to put the rooms in first class shape and as these plans are comprehensive, Clearfield Masons will have one of the finest quarters in the state.

TRINITY METHODIST CHURCH

Tomorrow's Communion Day at Trinity Methodist Church.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered in the morning, and in the evening following a sermon by the pastor, the communion service will be concluded.

The entire membership is urged to be present.

The Sunday School rally, on last Sunday, brought out an attendance of nearly 500. Every scholar should help to make the rally day results permanent by being on hand tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock.

HELPING THE JEWS

For the first time in the history of their race, the Jews are asking help for their people from those who are not of their own blood. Here is why they are doing this.

1. They are doing it because 6,000,000 Jews in eastern and central Europe (almost twice as many as the number of Jews in the United States) are actually in need of food at this moment. They have nothing to look to, to keep them from immediate starvation, except the bread lines and soup kitchens and milk stations which American Jewish relief agencies are establishing. The conditions which have left them starving and dependent are not of their own making. War, which took their men, and destroyed their trade, and devastated the countries in which they have dwelt for centuries, and tore down their homes, and drove many of them to foreign lands, is alone to blame for their predicament. The problem of 6,000,000 starving men, women and little children ought to be the problem of all humanity.

2. The Jews are asking help from the whole United States because there are 75,000 homeless orphans and hundreds of thousands of other hungry children in eastern and central Europe. In Poland alone 800,000 youngsters would die if the help of the United States were suddenly withdrawn. Every orphanage is full and thousands of children are sleeping in the streets, and living on the scraps they get by begging—barefooted little bundles of rags, shivering and sobbing in the wind, who have forgotten the very taste of white bread and milk. Thousands of them cannot walk or stand, long-continued hunger has left them so weak. In Poland alone American Jewish Relief agencies fed 375,000 of these youngsters during the month of July, sent 27,000 of them to fresh air homes in the country, and gave hundreds of thousands of others milk at the milk stations. But it has not yet sufficient funds to care for them all. Twenty-five cents will buy for one of these youngsters more food than he has had at any one time for five years. Two hundred dollars will feed and clothe and house and school a lad or lassie for a whole year. The Jews of this country do not believe that the people of the United States will allow race or creed to weigh in the balance against the suffering of little children.

3. They are asking help from others for the Jews because the Jews have given help to others freely. In every campaign for relief funds for those of other nationalities, in every patriotic drive, the Jews have done even more than their share. In the United States they gave more than 200,000 young men to the Army, Navy and Marines, during the recent war, a greater percentage than was contributed by any other element of the population. They did this freely and gladly, as they now urge others to give help to their people.

4. They are asking help because $35,000,000 will save the Jewish race in Poland, Lithuania, Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Palestine, Siberia and the Orient from starvation during the coming year. It will enable the milk stations and soup kitchens to keep open for that period, and new ones to be established. It will establish orphanages, it will give children food, and a place to sleep. It will help reorganize work. It will give the Jewish race in eastern Europe a chance to begin to work out their own rehabilitation.

5. Because in all these countries homeless Jewish babies not yet a year old are sleeping on the streets at night, hundreds upon hundreds of frightened, hungry children, huddled together like little animals, because in Warsaw children five and six years old are often no larger than babies a few months old, because all over eastern Europe an unprecedented number of parents have gone insane, as helpless they sat and watched their children starve, because Americans have shown that they know that humanity is a far bigger thing than religion or race or any other superficial distinction—for all these reasons the Jews are asking help for their people from you.

—THAT ENDS WELL—
By EDNA FOREST.

Mollie had been playing a game, a very interesting and secret game, and she had never been so happy in all her life. The game was "Hide and Seek," of an entirely new, and romantic nature, and Mollie returned from her last exploit in high, but subdued spirits.

Eleanor, the married sister, whom she visited, must not suspect the delightful pastime of her summer afternoon. Eleanor, strictly conventional, would be horror-stricken. The secret game had begun by chance, and on Mollie's side was the advantage.

When she had arisen early one inviting morning slipping silently down past closed rooms to a dewy garden beneath, she had intended to take but a brief dip in the sea, and when Mollie, disporting herself among the waves, looked down the isolated beach, she fancied herself monarch—or perhaps monarch "ess," of all she surveyed.

As she sat upon a great stone in the early sunshine, she saw, however, that another as ambitious as she, was swimming about in the blue.

Mollie, in embarrassment, darted again into the water, going further out than she had heretofore ventured, and being roughly brought to her senses by the swimmer himself.

"It is dangerous for you to be out here alone," he said. "I am returning to the hotel. You'd better come back."

Mollie suddenly weakened, requested breathlessly, his help.

When the two reached the shore, she resting in the warm sands, thanked him, beginning in her pretty way, a sort of "holding" conversation.

The man at least was held by it, for he made no motion to carry out his intention of returning to the hotel. And this was Mollie's advantage from the beginning. She recognized at once, in her rescuer, a certain noted curate from the city, whose arrival at the resort had been heralded a few days before. Eleanor, indeed, was an attendant at his city church.

But the curate himself was left unenlightened as to Mollie's knowledge of his identity, and ignorant of her own. It was as they were pleasantly chatting that she waved her hand in quick farewell, and literally disappeared.

Mr. Sutherland, Eleanor innocently regretted, was returning to the city at the end of the fortnight and she feared she would have no opportunity of entertaining him at the cottage.

Mollie, in her secret planning, decided to completely disappear from Mr. Sutherland's life before the end of his fortnight, leaving to him ever after but a romantic and, she hoped, a pleasing memory.

So, she was seated demurely reading in the rector's favorite book as he came down into the glen. Her dress was blue cotton, her white collar and cuffs neat and plain.

Her wide eyes expressed surprise at the rector's appearance. His keen eyes expressed pleasure. When Mollie would have politely departed, he begged her to remain.

The sun proclaimed the noon luncheon hour, when she finally took from Mr. Sutherland, the volume of poems which he had been reading aloud.

"Good-bye," laughed Mollie, and was instantly lost to view among the trees.

Though the rector arose in quest of her, Mollie was gone. Which branching path she had chosen he did not know. But he went back to his seat beneath the oak—to sit again and dream of her. Then at last, Eleanor brought Mollie's fascinating game to an unexpected end.

"Mr. Sutherland, the rector is coming to dinner at five tonight," she said. "I cannot be back from our motor trip until six. Be here to welcome him. Mollie, and, do make a pleasing impression, dear. Mr. Sutherland's opinion is worth while."

Mollie sighed. So she was to have no memory romance after all, and to the man she would be but a commonplace girl, in a commonplace, modern home.

Freda was admitting the tall figure of the rector as she reached the foot of the stairs. It was impossible for Mollie to retreat. In desperation she slipped into a hall closet beneath the stairs.

Mollie knew after a suffocating lapse in the closet that he had made himself comfortable for a long wait. Hopefully Mollie fumbled along the wall, finding there evidently a maid's enveloping apron. Frantically she stuffed her hair into the starched cap's crown, her feet, sandals and all, went into the shoes, then Mollie opened the closet door.

The rector stared and Mollie stared at a reflection of herself in the mirror. Freda's borrowed apron was far from clean. Mollie's hair was escaping from Freda's cap. Speechlessly, she fled up the stair.

It was Freda who knocked presently at Mollie's door.

"That man," she said, disgustedly, "says he must speak to 'ollier maid.' He don't believe me that I'm the only maid. You go tell him."

With the laughter light of "hide and seek" still in her eyes, Mollie came, very properly dressed, down the stair.

Eleanor returning later, was astonished to hear her rector happily pre-aching:

"I'm going to see that you stay found, now that I have you at last, Mollie dear."

Robert White of Glen Richey returned home today after being a juror for two weeks here.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(Copyright, 1919, Western Newspaper Union)

LESSON FOR OCTOBER 5
JOHN AND PETER BECOME DISCIPLES OF JESUS.

LESSON TEXT—John 1:29-42.
GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus said unto him, follow me—John 1:43.
ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Matt. 9:9; Mark 2:13-17; John 1:43-51.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Finding the best friend.
JUNIOR TOPIC—John and Peter decide to follow Jesus.
INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—Becoming disciples of Jesus.
SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—Claims of Christ upon all men.

I. John the Baptist Testifies to His Disciples Concerning Jesus (vv. 29-34).
1. Jesus as the Lamb of God (v. 29). "Lamb" was familiar to the Jewish mind. It denoted a substitutionary sacrifice for sin. Christ was the true lamb to which every sacrificial offering pointed. He was the lamb which Israel should have brought to the slaughter (Isa. 53:7), upon whom the Lord laid man's iniquity. Christ was God's lamb because he was the one set apart from the foundation of the world to make atonement for man's sins (1 Pet. 1:18-20). John invited his disciples to behold the Lamb of God.

2. The Baptizer with the Holy Ghost (vv. 30-35).
The Spirit descended upon him as Isaiah said (Isa. 11:2). John then knew for a certainty that he was the baptizer with the Holy Ghost. The Same Holy Spirit will be given to all who ask for him (Luke 11:13).

3. Jesus is the Son of God (v. 34).
Being the son of God he is one in nature with God.

II. Two Disciples Following Jesus (vv. 35-47).
As a result of the Baptist's testimony, two of the disciples leave him and follow Jesus. At John's request they looked. This look was sufficient to induce them to follow Jesus. A sincere look upon Jesus is always sufficient. John did not become envious of Christ's success, but rejoiced in it (John 3:29-30). All Sunday school teachers should so witness that the pupils will look to and follow Jesus. This is the whole method, the aim and substance of salvation.

III. The Disciples Abiding With Jesus (vv. 38, 39).
Seeing the disciples following him, Jesus made inquiry as to their object. Their reply showed the desire to go apart privately where they could disclose their hearts to him. He invited them to his abode, where for the remainder of that day they enjoyed sweet intercourse with him.

IV. The Disciples Bringing Others to Jesus (vv. 40-42).
Having found by experience what fellowship with Jesus means, they go at once and tell others of their priceless treasure.

1. Andrew brings Peter (vv. 40-42).
Peter was Andrew's brother. A true brother who has found Christ will go and tell his brethren. The proper place to begin witnessing for Christ is among one's kindred (Luke 8:30).

(2) Philip brings Nathaniel (vv. 43-45).
He witnessed to him concerning the messiahship of Jesus. He told them that Christ was he of whom Moses and the prophets did speak. Christ is the sum and substance of the Old Testament.

The disciples invited others to come and see. They knew that if they would but put Jesus to the test they would believe. Christianity courts investigation (John 7:17).

When Life Grows Broader.
God does not count prosperity as we count it. Our sense of proportion is largely shaped by our experiences. When life is quiet and sheltered, and the stream runs smoothly, we notice every ripple and magnify every small obstruction. We are fully occupied with our work, our small worries. Then comes some grief, calamity, or new responsibility which suddenly changes everything. Our old interests are dwarfed and look so petty that we wonder that we ever allowed such trifles to burden our souls. By such experiences life grows broader and higher and takes on new values. We have new standards of measurement for our fellow men as well as ourselves.

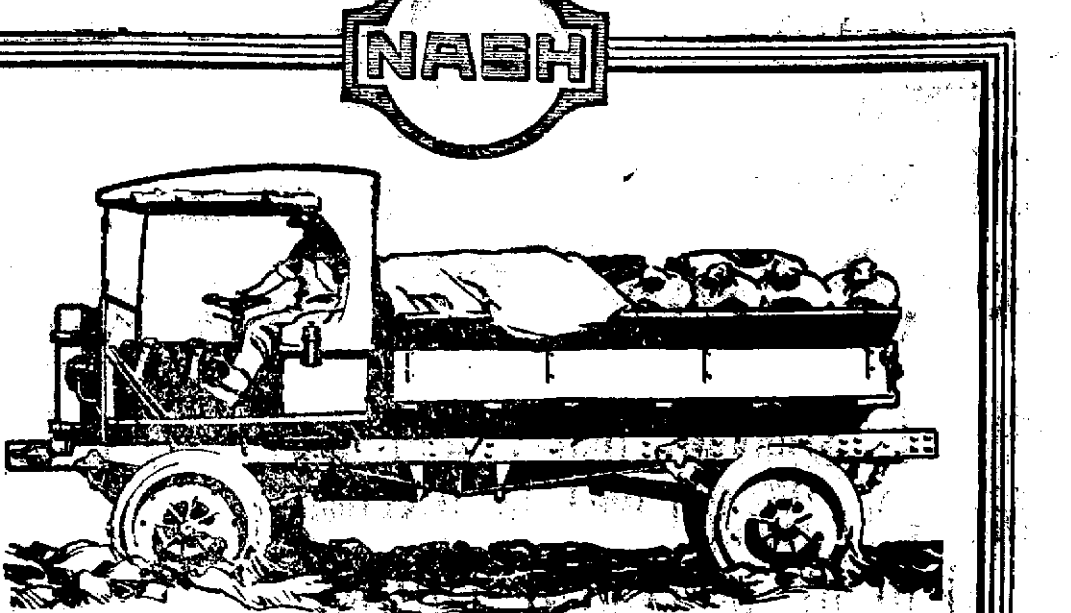

The Bible.
God might, of course, have given us a literally divine book, written by his finger on tables of stone. We find that he chose to give us instead a library of books by human authors, with very different styles and characteristics. I cannot help connecting it with the equally obvious fact that he did not reveal himself by an angel, or millions of angels, but by a man who worked in a carpenter's shop.—Rev. J. H. Moulton, D.D.

Cheerfulness.
Better to be small and shine, than to be great and cast a shadow. Cheerfulness is God's medicine. Everybody ought to bathe in it. Grim care, anxiety and all the rest of life can be scoured off with the oil of cheerfulness.

Love Never Tires.
Love is indefatigable; it never tires. Love is inexhaustible; it lives and is born again of itself, and the more it pours itself forth, the more it abounds.—De Lamennais.

Miss Marilla Edmiston is spending the week with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hattwick, of Irona.

Be Pretty! Turn Gray Hair Dark

Look young! Nobody can tell if you use Grandmother's simple recipe Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

THE CO

By GLADYS

Mrs. Adams' visit to the home of her son, Howard, at Osceola, was opened quickly and in a friendly way. "I'm here at last," Mrs. Adams glanced at her watch. "I was calling on you."

"Why, mother, I am a girl," she threw back her curls, laughing merrily. "Won't you be able to tell us twins apart?"

"I thought by the way you always comes in like a s'gun. Where have you got?"

"Down by the river. I knew so we did not hear you first called."

"Well," said Mrs. Adams, "X. Emery has just been here and invited both of you girls to her musicale next Wednesday evening."

"She said it was going to be just grand. Professor West, who has just returned from France, is going to sing. He is Sergeant West now, you know."

"You said she invited us both?" Vivian gasped.

"Yes, dear, and I am afraid you will have a hard time deciding," her mother answered.

"There's nothing to decide. It's Virginia's turn. I went to the musicale last month, you know. Oh, how I wish we had more than one best dress!" she exclaimed passionately.

It was not until Wednesday morning that Vivian appeared to cheer up somewhat. She had a consultation with her mother, who interrupted her by exclaiming, "It will never do. Of course there's no harm in it, but if you get into any trouble, don't blame anyone but yourselves."

"No one will ever know about it," responded Vivian confidently.

"I'll go down to the village now and call at Mrs. Blake's. I know she will be willing."

Mrs. Blake lived across from Miss Emery's, and she received Vivian cordially.

That evening, Virginia, in her pink silk muslin that belonged to her and her sister jointly, went timidly up the path leading to the Emery home, feeling very happy.

Miss Emery, in beautiful brocade silk, was passing through the hall when Virginia was shown in by the butler.

"Which one is it?" she asked. "I'm sorry you both couldn't have come." Virginia was placed where she could see everyone who played or sang. Then she gave herself up to enjoyment. She watched Sergeant West eagerly. It was only in dreams that she had ever heard such tones.

Sergeant West saw her and met the vivid glance of her eyes.

He turned to his hostess and said, "Can that young lady sing?"

"Indeed she can," answered Miss Emery proudly.

The next moment Virginia felt a hand on her shoulder. She looked startledly into Sergeant West's face. "Will you sing for me?" he asked.

"I will play for you and you may sing what you please. Are you willing?"

"I'll try," she answered shyly. It was nearly an hour later that Sergeant West again remembered the girl.

"I want you to sing once more," he said. "I have a plan. You have a voice, and with teaching, you could become a singer. Perhaps I can arrange to give you a couple of hours each week."

"I'm afraid I am a bit timid," said the girl, "but since you ask me I will try."

He was sorry for her as she stood by the piano. Her face was very white, and her lips almost stiff.

"Have courage," said the singer. "You did so well before."

The accompaniment began; but when an untutored, but rich contralto voice commenced the song there was a sudden discord among the keys of the piano, and Sergeant West wheeled about and stared at the trembling girl beside him. "What does it mean?" cried the artist.

"It cannot be possible that this girl has two distinct singing voices, one very high and the other very low."

The girl at whom everyone was now looking, tried twice to speak before she could say a word. Then she stammered, "I—I am the other twin if you please, sir."

"You are not the one that sang first?" he asked.

"No, sir, that was my sister, Virginia. It was her turn with our dress—"

Vivian stammered, then was silent. One half-hour before, Virginia had slipped out unobserved and met her sister at Mrs. Blake's. In their hurry in exchanging gowns, Virginia had not told her sister she had been obliged to sing.

The next morning Sergeant West returned to New York. While he was waiting for his train, he saw two girls in plain gingham gowns, hurrying down the road. It was Virginia that spoke for both.

"Sergeant West, we could not help coming to see you off—and to thank you."

Happiness shone in two pairs of eyes when he answered, "I shall not forget the lessons I am to give you when I return next month."

UNAWARE

By AGNES G. BROGAN.

Barris sat before a confusing litter of papers, and passed his hand in troubled fashion over his forehead.

Allan Barris was a play-writer, as well as manager of various departments connected with that work. His ambition was to present a new and truly great actress in one of his original plays. That desire gave no promise of fulfillment. Matter-of-fact affairs continually claimed his time.

Here, among the litter, were pitiful letters, begging work of almost every kind—those of confident would-be "stars" he found it necessary to ignore. The city seemed to be filled with inexperienced girls certain of their own histrionic ability.

Here was one, from a young woman who had at first written in the enthusiasm of sure success, asking for a certain part in one of his prominent plays. "Though she was unfamiliar with theatrical work," she frankly confessed, "she knew that she could portray his character of 'Norman' faithfully." Her request for a personal interview and trial had been ignored.

The second letter which came from the aspirant was decidedly humbler; she would be glad of "a few speaking lines."

The next appeal was for an interview only, and the last, which claimed Allan Barris' amused attention, was for office work of any kind which he could give her. She had suffered "strange misfortune," she wrote, and her need was great.

The appeal touched him, not so much by its pathos as by its cheerful persistence. He wrote the girl, asking her to call upon the following day, and he had almost forgotten his indulgence when she was announced.

In his mind, Barris pictured his frank applicant as a glowing creature garbed in popularly approved fashion. Instead, it was a small gray-clad figure which awaited obediently his invitation from the doorway. The gray dress was softly clinging, with a quaint kerchief about her shoulders, and it was the girl's shy, glowing purple eyes which first impressed him.

She had spoken adventurously, she was "musically good looking"—"musical" was the word.

"Can you do stenography and type-writing?" he asked.

The girl sadly shook her head.

"If you could give me other things at first, I would learn that later," she spoke in a sort of soft eagerness.

"Heretofore, I had no opportunity of learning. My life was all ease."

She caught her breath tremulously and threw out her hands in a hopeless gesture. The wistful eyes were misty with tears.

"Everything changed for me in one moment. That was the strange, hard part of it."

Quickly she brushed the tears from her eyes and leaned toward Barris.

"Can you believe me," she asked, "that I have now between five and six hundred dollars?"

At his astonished stare, she smiled suddenly, very bravely, Barris thought.

"If you will give me some work to do at once that part of the trouble will soon be disposed of," she told him.

The busy man, whose sympathy and activity were usually bound up in his own intricate work, found himself moved now as he had never been moved to pity and admiration. The girl's shyness could not be doubted; her plucky willingness to work herself out of a discouraging situation won him immediate championship.

"You might begin," he suggested, "by answering that irritating telephone; use your judgment as to whether response upon my part is imperative, or may be postponed. I'm maddeningly busy."

The girl, her hat swiftly removed, was already at the telephone.

Barris noted approvingly the soft arrangement of her hair, in keeping some way with the trim gray frock and serious eyes. For a time he was not disturbed by the telephone, continuing his dictation to an observant young woman typist. Subconsciously, at last, he sensed the stranger's troubled gaze in his direction. Surely, she seemed to be signaling his help.

Barris abruptly dismissed his stenographer and turned to answer the girl's silent appeal. Her eyes, as he looked down upon her, were darkly tragic.

"I must go," she said, breathlessly. "I must leave you; and, oh, I did so want to stay—my first chance—and the evening end for money—" Her voice broke in its despair.

Again Barris was moved, deeply; the secret, the mystery of her unluckily crippled him.

"Explain yourself," he said tersely. "Are you, after all, an impostor, or an innocent mistakenly enduring some trouble?"

He was surprised at his own emotions.

"I ask, because I honestly wish to help you," he added gently.

The little gray figure came close. The girl held out imploring hands. Two purple eyes came a laughing gleam of triumph.

"Thanks," she said. "Your own belief in my acting is the surest proof of my success. I tell you that I could do it. For the past hour I have been your 'Norman'; and you have forgotten her in me."

And so it happened that Allan Barris realized his dream, presenting a new and truly great actress in one of his original plays.

Miss Margaret Gilliland left last evening to spend the week end with friends in Mutha Furnace.

Interior Decorator

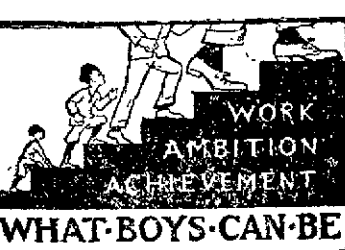

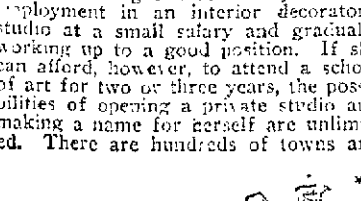

By Elizabeth Mator

There are plenty of professions today in which a girl can compete with her brother; how much more tempting is one in which she can outshine him.

From the time she rearranges her doll house until she decorates her room at college, she is expressing her inborn love for art and beauty. She is developing skill in interior decorating.

But a love for beauty is not all that is needed. A successful professional interior decorator must also have unusual good taste, and this good taste must be improved and made effective by proper training.

Such training can be had by securing employment in an interior decorator's studio at a small salary and gradually working up to a good position. If she can afford, however, to attend a school of art for two or three years, the possibility of opening a private studio and making a name for herself are unlimited. There are hundreds of towns and

The Aeronautical Engineer

By R. S. Alexander

What the automobile industry was twenty years ago, the aeronautical industry is right now. It is just starting. There are opportunities for boys with loyalty and persistence to go into it, stick with it, develop it, and later reap the rewards of its growth.

No boy should consider the work unless he has considerable mechanical ability to start with. An airplane is a very delicate piece of machinery.

There are several ways of getting into aviation. One is to start in an airplane factory. Here a young man learns about the mechanism of the airplane—knowledge that is of great value when he takes up outdoor work later on. Another way to start is to enlist in the United States Army Service for three years. Here training is given, not only in the construction and care of planes, but in the flying also. A third way is to go to a school of aviation. Many of the better technical schools now have such branches.

The aeronautical engineer is the mechanical engineer of the business. He improves planes, designs new ones, directs the manufacture, and in general is the brains of the business. Only a few can ever be great aeronautical engineers, but thousands can find positions in aviation.

There are three main lines of work. First there is the manufacturing, which is much like work in any other big factory. Then there is the work of the ground men, the garage men who man the hangars and take care of the machines. Finally there is the thrilling work of the air pilot. More and more pilots will be needed as planes are more and more used for carrying mail and passengers.

For further information as to the opportunities open in aviation write to the Aero Club of America, 297 Madison Avenue, New York City; to the Aerial Club, 230 Madison Avenue, New York City; or to the Aero Club of Illinois, 430 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago. For good books on the subject write to the Aeronautical Library, 299 Madison Avenue, New York City. Good periodicals are "Aerial Age," Madison Avenue at 40th, New York City; and "Aviation," 22 East 17th Street, New York City.

ALL SIGNS MUST BE REMOVED FROM PUBLIC HIGHWAYS

HARRISBURG, Oct. 3.—Candidates for office in the coming election will save money if they will refrain from placing announcement cards on telegraph or telephone poles or elsewhere within the legal limits of State Highways, the State Highway Department announced today.

During the last week in various portions of Pennsylvania, but particularly in the northwestern counties, candidates for office have been placing the Highways with announcement cards of their candidacies. The result has not added to the natural beauty of the thoroughfares. The Department several weeks ago issued an order directing that no advertising matter of any nature be permitted to remain within the legal limits of the road. Should the Department decide to proceed against persons who violate this law, a fine could be imposed for the placing of every one of the offender's cards or advertising material found on the roadway.

FOR MEN WHO WORK HARD

Factory workers, railroad men, farmers, miners, mill employees and all men who work at hard, straining physical labor are more or less subject to kidney trouble. Wolf, Green Bay Wis., writes: "Foley Kidney Pills relieved me of a severe backache, that had bothered me for several months. A few bottles fixed me up in good shape." Sold everywhere.

COURT NOTES

Gorgeous Evening Gowns and Others

Western News (per Union)

Heavy satin cloth of silver and rich tulle are the materials that are in demand for formal evening gowns. These materials are gorgeous in themselves and therefore adapted to the present styles in evening dress which depend upon graceful draping of the fabric and not upon embellishments for interest. It is beauty of fabric and beauty of lines that must hold the attention.

Sometimes, in the simpler models, the drapery suggests the use and flowing lines of the classic Greek garments and sometimes a single piece of material appears to be wrapped about the figure, with a long loose end forming a train. But an artist in draping may use material more freely than is indicated in either of these styles so long as he knows how to use drapery to glorify the figure. The corse is usually plain and flat at the front and held in place by thin shoulder straps. It follows the lines of the corset, figure very closely here and does not concern itself with covering much of the back. Gowns of this kind cut in step length or a little shorter in back shades or jade green and in the regulation evening shades worn with satin slippers and silk hose to match, are likely to outshine any rivals.

The draped satin gown in the picture is one of those in which the material seems to be wrapped about the figure and to end in a short train. It is of white satin with a drapery of tulle on one shoulder that falls almost to the ankles from the other shoulder. Strands of beads fall in long loops and there is a trailing spray of silver roses at the back to finish up the splendor.

The pretty dress of turquoise color with a crepe shawl in company with this gorgeous evening gown does not aspire to rival it. Yet it might appear at the same function and prove as pleasing. Not every woman can carry off an emerald and turquoise have so changed that many ladies have no longer much use for it. The simpler, fine-lined things suit them better so they choose that which fits person and do not attempt to play a role that does not please them.

WOMAN'S CLUB MEMBERS TO RECEIVE WAR MEDALS

The meeting of the Woman's Club at the home of Mrs. Philip Reed Thursday evening was well attended and was unusually interesting, as plans for very important social welfare work were discussed, and decided upon, which it carried out will greatly benefit the whole community.

We say "if carried out" for the success of any uplift movement depends largely upon co-operation, and the Woman's Club needs the co-operation of the leading citizens in order that the efforts they are making for the betterment of the community be successful.

The Club has done much work that is commendable in the past, and especially during the war.

Recently the president, Mrs. Boulton, was informed that in recognition of their work in the last Liberty Loan drive the members on the committee during the drive are to receive war medals.

The Liberty bonds bought by the club, being all paid for but $10.00, the club voted to pay that amount out of the balance in the treasury, which Mrs. Roy Fulton, treasurer, reported to be $10.46.

Mrs. George Reed told about the unsuccessful efforts on the part of several members to secure a district nurse. As this is one of the most vital questions with which the club has to deal, a district nurse being so necessary to the welfare of the community, the club has appointed an other committee and will renew their efforts to secure the nurse.

In view of the fact that the influenza epidemic is again predicted it will enter Southland College surely behooves the citizens of town to co-operate with the Woman's Club and the physicians to secure the district nurse, and thus help to safeguard the town in case of all epidemic.

Mrs. R. V. Esterline, a prominent member of several charitable organizations who was a visitor at the club, gave a very graphic account of the splendid work done by the various public nurses in Altoona.

Mrs. Giffert's report on the work done by the Tuberculosis Committee was one that should make Clearfield proud of her Woman's Club.

Nine tuberculosis sufferers were sent to sanitariums in August, clothing and railroad transportation being provided.

This committee needs a lot more help (in the way of clothing and money) than they are getting. Money is needed to provide milk and eggs for those who are too ill to be taken away.

Another fine thing to the credit of the Woman's Club is the "buying" of a French war orphan. Mrs. Philip Reed who has charge of this work, reports 28 orphans "old" and only one left to be "adopted." Only $85.50 will keep one of these little waifs for one year.

A very clever little play was given following the business session. Those taking part were Mrs. Boulton, Mrs. Striver, Mrs. Leonard, Mrs. Stauffer, Misses Isabelle Powell and Betty Weaver.

Mrs. Boulton and Mrs. Zerfos are delegates to the State Federation.

Miss Joseph Banta left this morning for Sutherland, Fla. where she is attending to her duties.

The Course of Thrift

In the columns of this paper you will find the advertisements of alert, progressive merchants and manufacturers who are telling you something they believe you ought to know.

This advertising is news. Real news about the very things that interest you most--articles that will save your money, lessen your work, or add materially to your comfort and well-being.

Thrifty men and women read advertising. To them it is a plain every-day business proposition--a duty to themselves and to their pocketbooks.

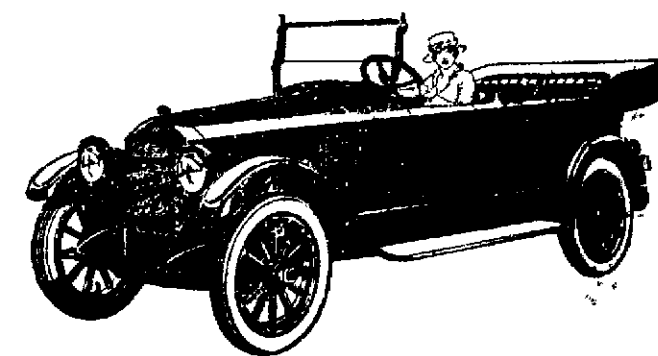

It tells them where they can buy exactly what they want at a price they can afford to pay.

Advertising pays them. They make it pay. It will pay you too.

A few minutes spent in reading the "ads" at home, on the car, or at the office, is well worth while.

Judging by the records in the Prothonotary's office, there appears to be an insanity epidemic at the Clearfield County jail, and Sheriff Gorman will no doubt be expected to add another can of salmon to the weekly menu of malefactors in his care. The victim, all of whom are suffering from hallucinations of varying degrees, are Anthony Kutz, John Facella, and Laro Nisigik.

AROUND THE WORLD WITH THE AMERICAN RED CROSS In Roumania.

Soon after the entrance of the United States in the war the successes of the Central Powers in Roumania had reduced that country to a most deplorable condition and in the summer of 1917 the American Red Cross dispatched its first Roumanian relief contingent. Two hospitals were at once taken over and operated by the Red Cross, a canteen for the starving refugees established and food and clothing distributed over a large area. Transportation was one of the toughest problems with which the Red Cross workers in Roumania had to deal. Here is seen an oxcart used by the Red Cross to carry its relief supplies up into the mountains.

The way Uncle Sam can dig up money is bound to make everybody want to be his ally in case of another war.

When the devastating world war broke out and began engulfing almost the entire European continent in the red flames of war in its cruellest and most destructive forms, the people of this great American republic from humanitarian instincts alone, immediately began to band themselves together in many organizations for the Christian purpose of rendering aid and succor in such places and to such innocent, defenseless peoples whose abilities to help themselves were rendered hopelessly inadequate and unavailing. The result was when the cry went up from ravished, death-stricken Belgium for the necessities with which to keep soul and body together in the little children and aged and infirm non-combatants of the land, America and Americans rushed instantly to the rescue, that great American Herbert Hoover was selected to succor the nation in distress and thanks to his genius as an organizer, the admiral Belgian Relief Commission was formed and the tireless activities of this admirable body of efficient American executives and the generous bounty of our citizens rescued a whole people from starvation.

As the flood of war engulfed other lands and other nations additional organizations were formed and additional contributions generously made to all corners with America's usual prodigality for things and occasions worth while. Roumania, Serbia, Greece, Bulgaria, Armenia, and every other land and people in turn were given aid as their wants became pressing and were made known while the ravaged provinces of Russia, Galicia, Poland, and the Ukraine were recipients of our bounty in adequate measure.

Then, too, as human liberty was shaken to its foundations by the victorious hun hordes and this young giant nation of the New World was forced to enter the conflict that right might triumph and international obligations be respected by all nations, even more organizations were created to bear the burden of supporting our own soldier boys in some comfort at least in training camp and on the battlefields of Europe. In all of these different organizations and demands no class of people throughout this broad land responded with more generosity or alacrity than did our Jewish people; no demand for aid in the alleviation of suffering anywhere met with a deaf ear when the Jewish citizen was approached and wherever they were found their names not unlike the storied Abou Ben Adhem either led the list or were very near the top.

During all of this time the native lands and peoples of these same Jewish citizens were being visited by the furies of war in its cruellest forms and in addition to the burdens assumed by their response to appeals for aid for the common good these people with that God-given loyalty to race which stands out as one of the very strongest points of character in the Jewish race, these generous people were called upon year after year to extend aid and relief to their own starving fellows. Despite the many millions annually contributed by the wealthy Jews of this and other countries distress has continued to grow among the Jewish people and today of the 12,000,000 Jews in Poland and Russia at least one-half that number or 6,000,000 men, women and children are literally starving to death.

Again has the appeal been made to big-hearted, Christian America for food and clothing for the starving and naked. Will that appeal be made in vain? Will the richest people of the richest and most favored country under God's sun fail to respond or to give in His name at this time, when the need was never so urgent? We say No, a thousand Noes.

It is estimated that $35,000,000 are needed of us for the immediate and permanent relief of these starving Jews and American and Americans are going to make good that amount. Every organization created for war work during the past five years has been re-created for this final and more pressing need and drive and the soliciting campaign which starts next Monday will seek to raise $35,000 in this county or $25,000 outside of the DuBois district. The solicitors will visit all industrial plants Monday and each employee will be asked to contribute $1.00. That sum is not much in itself, but it may be the means of saving a little child or an aged man or woman from starvation. Think of the possibilities and give in the name of humanity.

A Call To Christian America

That the United States is a Christian nation is a statement which is often made though, aside from the fact that the majority of its people are baptized in that faith and are buried under its ceremonial, there are often times when some great big Christian work is needed to demonstrate that we have the Christian spirit as well as the title.

Christianity is Love. Love is Charity. Lacking in Charity we can have no Love and where Love is dead there can be no Christianity.

Christianity and Judaism alike practice the principles of Love and Charity. In this respect at least they are similar. Both have contributed largely to charitable institutions and charitable causes. Along with the church and the synagogue have come hospitals and institutions of learning. Forward they have marched in the path of Progress. Christian and Jew join hands in the furtherance of great humanitarian projects disregarding creed and race.

Here in Clearfield county we doubt if there is a Christian church which has not, at some time or other, accepted the gifts of Jewish business men. Rarely does the solicitor meet with refusal when a paper is presented to them. Aside from his support of Christian churches his gifts to hospitals and other worthy institutions have been numerous, freely given and generous. We have found him a good citizen.

The time is here when Christian Americans have the opportunity of proving their Christianity. Christianity itself does not need to be proven but the individual Christian needs the test applied quite often. Love of brother men, charity to all, are Christian tenets. Ministering to the sick, caring for the dying and help for the afflicted is the work laid out by the Master. Sacrifice is the price which a true Christian will pay.

From the Far East comes the call for help. The call is carried by means of the printed word and no Christian, blessed with the ability to read and reason, can escape the consequences of neglecting to read the call and consider the dire need of help.

The call is that of a starving babe; a pitiable wail which is all but stilled by the pangs of starvation, a cry that has already been stilled in thousands of cases by a merciful Death Angel.

The call is that of a frantic mother sitting in squalid surroundings praying that the cry of the little one might be hushed and that she might be spared the agony of seeing her little one pass into the Great Beyond for the need of nourishment.

The call is that of thousands who have been unable to endure this veritable Hell and whose nerves and minds have broken, making of them raving maniacs.

The call is from aged men and women, their sons shot down in war; their homes broken up and not even crusts of bread on which to live.

The call is from GOD who gave the commandments.

The man who cannot hear the cry of the starving babe, the man who is deaf to the entreaties of the frantic mother, the men who cannot respond to the necessities of aged men and women, surely cannot be called a Christian.

A Praying Christian is a handy man at prayer meeting but it is Paying Christians who will put the Jewish Relief Campaign across next week.

Be a Paying Christian when the solicitor calls.

The men who fought to make the world safe for democracy and the Army who served them in their hour of need for a common cause to save the starving children and aged men and women of Eastern Europe, and the purposes of the Jewish War Relief Campaign have now been endorsed by the American Legion in eighteen counties in Western Pennsylvania, including Allegheny county, and by the Salvation Army.

Both the Salvation Army and the American Legion are doing more than give their moral support in this work of humanity and mercy. In Pittsburgh, the Salvation Army is working as a team, soliciting funds with which to save the lives of countless thousands of helpless people. Members of the American Legion have also joined the various teams throughout the district and realize that the war would have been fought in vain if the civilian populations of communities freed from the Hun yoke are to starve, and they have re-enlisted in this struggle, not to take, but to save lives.

There is another organization that is also giving invaluable assistance to the Jewish War Relief Campaign. It is the Junior Red Cross. In Allegheny County, every school chapter has sent to the headquarters of the campaign committee, two of its club members, who have received all advertising signs and posters, and the little fellows have taken it upon themselves to supplement the work of their older brother, and have placed the symbol of charity in every conceivable place. Still another organization has come to the aid of these suffering children across the seas, an organization whose war work proved so invaluable and who brought forcibly to attention the tremendous boy power of the world. The Boy Scouts are helping and everywhere that a scout troop has been organized, is found a troop of workers. Everything that a little boy can do, and to aid this work of mercy, is being performed by the khaki clad lad in Pittsburgh they serve as messengers, as bundle carriers, as bill posters, as advertisement distributors and in every town where there are scout organizations, may be found visible examples of their handiwork.

AMERICAN LEGION SELECTED FIRST SET OF OFFICERS

HAZLEBURG, Oct. 3.—At the session today of the American Legion, the first held by the organization in Pennsylvania, George J. Tyler, of Montgomery county, was elected state commander. Other officers were: Alexander L. Kling, Pittsburgh, first vice; David Spangle, Williamsport, second vice; and Harry C. Blank, Allentown third. Margaret C. Thomas, of Philadelphia, state arbiter; David Farquhar, Westmoreland, and Robert McEldowney, Cameron county, state masters of arms; Rev. Luther Wolf, of Philadelphia, was elected chaplain. Allentown was chosen as the city in which the state convention will convene in 1920. An address by Governor Sproul was one of the features. The convention will adjourn tomorrow after passing on more than a hundred resolutions.

I saw this in The Progress.

CHICAGO WON YESTERDAY

The 1919 World's Series now underway, is attracting more attention throughout the country than any similar event in the last five years.

The bulk of the local fans are rooting for Pat Moran's Cincinnati team to cop the classic, and more than two hundred congregated in the DuSable assembly hall each afternoon to see the game reproduced on the electric score board. Every play is shown just as it occurs on the field, and the "died-in-the-wool" fans root just as hard as though the real diamond was spread out before them.

Chicago copied yesterday's game. Kerr, Chicago's kid pitcher, shut out the National League champs while his team mates put over 3 runs.

The series now stands: Cincinnati 2; Chicago 1.

PHILIPSBURG WINS SERIES

The Philipsburg All-Stars won the deciding game of the nine game series between Philipsburg and Houtzdale at Houtzdale yesterday afternoon. The series consisted of nine games, and the winner received a purse of $1,000. Each side had won four games up to yesterday, and the finish was very exciting, several scraps resulting between the adherents of the two teams.

The score of yesterday's game was Philipsburg, 6; Houtzdale, 4.

PRESIDENT HAD MORE REST LAST NIGHT. LITTLE CHANGE NOTICED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4. 1:40 P. M.—Dr. Grayson announced this afternoon that President Wilson's condition remains favorable and that the doctors called into conference with him are of this opinion. Examination of Wilson's eyes made by Dr. W. D. Schweinitz showed there has been no change since the last examination six months ago.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The President had a good night's rest and his condition is more favorable, said a statement issued at 10:55 a. m. today by Dr. Grayson. Joseph R. Wilson, the President's brother, was unable to remain here but is keeping in touch with the White House by telephone. Mrs. Wilson was in the sick room at an early hour today. She rarely leaves her husband's side. Mrs. Wilson is being assisted by two trained nurses. Dr. Grayson who has been showing evidence of worry since the President halted his speaking tour in Wichita last week, seemed more cheerful today than he has been for some time.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Dr. Grayson was at President Wilson's bedside for some time this morning. At this hour an official statement was momentarily expected. It was unofficially stated that the President was about the same. The President is still gravely ill. He showed a slight improvement last evening. Hope was expressed at the White House that this improvement reported by Dr. Grayson last night would mark the turning point in his illness and that he would show more progress today. Dr. Dercum, Philadelphia nerve specialist, was coming to Washington this morning for another consultation with Dr. Grayson and other physicians attending the President. It was emphasized at the White House that no alarm should be felt over Dr. Dercum's visit as it was arranged when he came to the city several days ago that he would come back to Washington for another consultation today.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—President Wilson's illness is expected to put upon his lieutenants in the Senate the responsibility of deciding how much to accept in the way of reservation to the peace treaty. Senators Hitchcock and Swanson must make the decision on reservations else that decision and the ratification of the treaty will be delayed is the belief of some Senators. Leaders expect that within five weeks at the outside the treaty will be decided on.

Hitchcock has steadily declined to discuss reservations or to commit himself in the slightest degree as to how much he will be willing to concede. Former President Taft's latest draft of reservations to Article Ten is in the hands of Senators today.

BARN FIRE AT WOODLAND CALLS OUT LOCAL LADDIES

Old Mooley had a little lung exercise this afternoon when a call for help was received from Woodland where fire broke out in a barn on the property of Arch Devling. There was a quantity of painting materials in the barn and the fire burned so fiercely that it was feared it would spread to nearby buildings. The local department set out for Woodland but the danger was past before they arrived there.

Friday, October 3rd, 1919, bids fair to be remembered by Clearfield members of the Masonic Fraternity for ninety nine years, as that day was yesterday, and last evening formal announcement was made of a substantial gift to Clearfield Lodge No. 311. Clearfield Lodge of Masons, while always in a flourishing condition, does not have a home of its own, and this disadvantage with its ever increasing problems of rentals and the handicap of being unable to fit up the social and lodge rooms in accordance with the tastes of the members, has been a matter of much concern to those who have the welfare of the craft at heart and the future in mind.

A committee composed of P. F. Davis, O. Bruce Porter and H. I. Fulton were authorized to go into the matter of acquiring permanent quarters many months ago. Last evening the committee made a formal report announcing that an option had been had been acquired on the Keystone Building; that the option would be exercised by Mr. A. W. Lee, and the entire third floor leased to the Masonic bodies, at a nominal rental for a period of ninety nine years—this generous arrangement being made by Mr. A. W. Lee, the oldest member of Clearfield Lodge. Needless to say, the proposition made by Mr. Lee was accepted promptly, and with a hearty vote of thanks by the members.

The lodge will immediately take steps to put the rooms in first class shape and as these plans are comprehensive, Clearfield Masons will have one of the finest quarters in the state.

HELPING THE JEWS

For the first time in the history of their race, the Jews are asking help for their people from those who are not of their own blood. Here is why they are doing this.

1. They are doing it because 6,000,000 Jews in eastern and central Europe (almost twice as many as the number of Jews in the United States) are actually in need of food at this moment. They have nothing to look to, to keep them from immediate starvation, except the bread lines and soup kitchens and milk stations which American Jewish relief agencies are establishing. The conditions which have left them starving and dependent are not of their own making. War, which took their men, and destroyed their trade, and devastated the countries in which they have dwelt for centuries, and tore down their homes, and drove many of them to foreign lands, is alone to blame for their predicament. The problem of 6,000,000 starving men, women and little children ought to be the problem of all humanity.

2. The Jews are asking help from the whole United States because there are 75,000 homeless orphans and hundreds of thousands of other hungry children in eastern and central Europe. In Poland alone 800,000 youngsters would die if the help of the United States were suddenly withdrawn. Every orphanage is full and thousands of children are sleeping in the streets, and living on the scraps they get by begging—barefooted little bundles of rags, shivering and sobbing in the wind, who have forgotten the very taste of white bread and milk. Thousands of them cannot walk or stand, long-continued hunger has left them so weak. In Poland alone American Jewish Relief agencies fed 375,000 of these youngsters during the month of July, sent 27,000 of them to fresh air homes in the country, and gave hundreds of thousands of others milk at the milk stations. But it has not yet sufficient funds to care for them all. Twenty-five cents will buy for one of these youngsters more food than he has had at any one time for five years. Two hundred dollars will feed and clothe and house and school a lad or lassie for a whole year. The Jews of this country do not believe that the people of the United States will allow race or creed to weigh in the balance against the suffering of little children.

3. They are asking help from others for the Jews because the Jews have given help to others freely. In every campaign for relief funds for those of other nationalities, in every patriotic drive, the Jews have done even more than their share. In the United States they gave more than 200,000 young men to the Army, Navy and Marines, during the recent war, a greater percentage than was contributed by any other element of the population. They did this freely and gladly, as they now urge others to give help to their people.

4. They are asking help because $35,000,000 will save the Jewish race in Poland, Lithuania, Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Palestine, Siberia and the Orient from starvation during the coming year. It will enable the milk stations and soup kitchens to keep open for that period, and new ones to be established. It will establish orphanages, it will give children food, and a place to sleep. It will help reorganize work. It will give the Jewish race in eastern Europe a chance to begin to work out their own rehabilitation.

5. Because in all these countries homeless Jewish babies not yet a year old are sleeping on the streets at night, hundreds upon hundreds of frightened, hungry children, huddled together like little animals, because in Warsaw children five and six years old are often no larger than babies a few months old, because all over eastern Europe an unprecedented number of parents have gone insane, as helpless they sat and watched their children starve, because Americans have shown that they know that humanity is a far bigger thing than religion or race or any other superficial distinction—for all these reasons the Jews are asking help for their people from you.

—THAT ENDS WELL

By EDNA FOREST.

Mollie had been playing a game, a very interesting and secret game, and she had never been so happy in all her life. The game was "Hide and Seek," of an entirely new, and romantic nature, and Mollie returned from her last exploit in high, but subdued spirits.

Eleanor, the married sister, whom she visited, must not suspect the delightful pastime of her summer afternoon. Eleanor, strictly conventional, would be horror-stricken. The secret game had begun by chance, and on Mollie's side was the advantage.

When she had arisen early one inviting morning slipping silently down past closed rooms to a dewy garden beneath, she had intended to take but a brief dip in the sea, and when Mollie, disporting herself among the waves, looked down the isolated beach, she fancied herself monarch—or perhaps monarch "ess," of all she surveyed.

As she sat upon a great stone in the early sunshine, she saw, however, that another as ambitious as she, was swimming about in the blue.

Mollie, in embarrassment, darted again into the water, going further out than she had heretofore ventured, and being roughly brought to her senses by the swimmer himself.

"It is dangerous for you to be out here alone," he said. "I am returning to the hotel. You'd better come back."

Mollie suddenly weakened, requested breathlessly, his help.

When the two reached the shore, she resting in the warm sands, thanked him, beginning in her pretty way, a sort of "holding" conversation.

The man at least was held by it, for he made no motion to carry out his intention of returning to the hotel. And this was Mollie's advantage from the beginning. She recognized at once, in her rescuer, a certain noted curate from the city, whose arrival at the resort had been heralded a few days before. Eleanor, indeed, was an attendant at his city church.

But the curate himself was left unenlightened as to Mollie's knowledge of his identity, and ignorant of her own. It was as they were pleasantly chatting that she waved her hand in quick farewell, and literally disappeared.

Mr. Sutherland, Eleanor innocently regretted, was returning to the city at the end of the fortnight and she feared she would have no opportunity of entertaining him at the cottage.

Mollie, in her secret planning, decided to completely disappear from Mr. Sutherland's life before the end of his fortnight, leaving to him ever after but a romantic and, she hoped, a pleasing memory.

So, she was seated demurely reading in the rector's favorite book as he came down into the glen. Her dress was blue cotton, her white collar and cuffs neat and plain.

Her wide eyes expressed surprise at the rector's appearance. His keen eyes expressed pleasure. When Mollie would have politely departed, he begged her to remain.

The sun proclaimed the noon luncheon hour, when she finally took from Mr. Sutherland, the volume of poems which he had been reading aloud.

"Good-bye," laughed Mollie, and was instantly lost to view among the trees. Though the rector arose in quest of her, Mollie was gone. Which branching path she had chosen he did not know. But he went back to his seat beneath the oak—to sit again and dream of her. Then at last, Eleanor brought Mollie's fascinating game to an unexpected end.

"Mr. Sutherland, the rector is coming to dinner at five tonight," she said. "I cannot be back from our motor trip until six. Be here to welcome him. Mollie, and, do make a pleasing impression, dear. Mr. Sutherland's opinion is worth while."

Mollie sighed. So she was to have no memory romance after all, and to the man she would be but a commonplace girl, in a commonplace, modern home.

Freda was admitting the tall figure of the rector as she reached the foot of the stairs. It was impossible for Mollie to retreat. In desperation she slipped into a hall closet beneath the stairs.

Mollie knew after a suffocating lapse in the closet that he had made himself comfortable for a long wait. Hopefully Mollie fumbled along the wall, finding there evidently a maid's enveloping apron. Frantically she stuffed her hair into the starched cap's crown, her feet, sandals and all, went into the shoes, then Mollie opened the closet door.

The rector stared and Mollie stared at a reflection of herself in the mirror. Freda's borrowed apron was far from clean. Mollie's hair was escaping from Freda's cap. Speechlessly, she fled up the stair.

It was Freda who knocked presently at Mollie's door.

"That man," she said, disgustedly, "says he must speak to 'ollier maid.' He don't believe me that I'm the only maid. You go tell him."

With the laughter light of "hide and seek" still in her eyes, Mollie came, very properly dressed, down the stair.

Eleanor returning later, was astonished to hear her rector happily pre-arranging:

"I'm going to see that you stay found, now that I have you at last, Mollie dear."

Robert White of Glen Richey returned home today after being a juror for two weeks here.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(Copyright, 1919, Western Newspaper Union)

LESSON FOR OCTOBER 5

JOHN AND PETER BECOME DISCIPLES OF JESUS.

LESSON TEXT—John 1:29-42.
GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus said unto him, follow me—John 1:43.
ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Matt. 9:9; Mark 2:13-17; John 1:43-51.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Finding the best friend.

JUNIOR TOPIC—John and Peter decide to follow Jesus.
INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—Becoming disciples of Jesus.
SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—Claims of Christ upon all men.

I. John the Baptist Testifies to His Disciples Concerning Jesus (vv. 29-34).

1. Jesus as the Lamb of God (v. 29). "Lamb" was familiar to the Jewish mind. It denoted a substitutionary sacrifice for sin. Christ was the true lamb to which every sacrificial offering pointed. He was the lamb which Israel should be brought to the slaughter (Isa. 53:7), upon whom the Lord laid man's iniquity. Christ was God's lamb because he was the one set apart from the foundation of the world to make atonement for man's sins (1 Pet. 1:18-20). John invited his disciples to behold the Lamb of God.

2. The Baptizer with the Holy Ghost (vv. 30-35).

The Spirit descended upon him as Isaiah said (Isa. 11:2). John then knew for a certainty that he was the baptizer with the Holy Ghost. The Same Holy Spirit will be given to all who ask for him (Luke 11:13).

3. Jesus is the Son of God (v. 34). Being the son of God he is one in nature with God.

II. Two Disciples Following Jesus (vv. 35-47).

As a result of the Baptist's testimony, two of the disciples leave him and follow Jesus. At John's request they looked. This look was sufficient to induce them to follow Jesus. A sincere look upon Jesus is always sufficient. John did not become envious of Christ's success, but rejoiced in it (John 3:29-30). All Sunday school teachers should so witness that the pupils will look to and follow Jesus. This is the whole method, the aim and substance of salvation.

III. The Disciples Abiding With Jesus (vv. 38, 39).

Seeing the disciples following him, Jesus made inquiry as to their object. Their reply showed the desire to go apart privately where they could disclose their hearts to him. He invited them to his abode, where for the remainder of that day they enjoyed sweet intercourse with him.

IV. The Disciples Bringing Others to Jesus (vv. 40-42).

Having found by experience what fellowship with Jesus means, they go at once and tell others of their priceless treasure.

1. Andrew brings Peter (vv. 40-42). Peter was Andrew's brother. A true brother who has found Christ will go and tell his brethren. The proper place to begin witnessing for Christ is among one's kindred (Luke 8:30).

(2) Philip brings Nathaniel (vv. 43-45). He witnessed to him concerning the messiahship of Jesus. He told them that Christ was he of whom Moses and the prophets did speak. Christ is the sum and substance of the Old Testament.

The disciples invited others to come and see. They knew that if they would but put Jesus to the test they would believe. Christianity courts investigation (John 7:17).

When Life Grows Broader.

God does not count prosperity as we count it. Our sense of proportion is largely shaped by our experiences. When life is quiet and sheltered, and the stream runs smoothly, we notice every ripple and magnify every small obstruction. We are fully occupied with our work, our small worries. Then comes some grief, calamity, or new responsibility which suddenly changes everything. Our old interests are dwarfed and look so petty that we wonder that we ever allowed such trifles to burden our souls. By such experiences life grows broader and higher and takes on new values. We have new standards of measurement for our fellow men as well as ourselves.

The Bible.

God might, of course, have given us a literally divine book, written by his finger on tables of stone. We find that he chose to give us instead a library of books by human authors, with very different styles and characteristics. I cannot help connecting it with the equally obvious fact that he did not reveal himself by an angel, or millions of angels, but by a man who worked in a carpenter's shop—Rev. J. H. Moulton, D.D.

Cheerfulness.

Better to be small and shine, than to be great and cast a shadow. Cheerfulness is God's medicine. Everybody ought to bathe in it. Grim care, anxiety and all the rest of life can be scoured off with the oil of cheerfulness.

Love Never Tires.

Love is indefatigable; it never tires. Love is inexhaustible; it lives and is born again of itself, and the more it pours itself forth, the more it abounds.—De Lamennais.

WHERE A NASH QUAD WILL FIT IN TO YOUR HAULING SCHEME

Every Wheel of The Four Is A Driver. Your Power Plant Is Doubled In This Way. A
NASH QUAD Will Go Where A Ford Won't

Four horses will pull more than two. Four drive wheels will furnish more power than two. That's the solution of the powerful performances of the NASH QUAD.

A sixty-horse power engine geared on a forty-to-one ratio furnishes a plant that will give you a surplus of hauling power for any condition that you'll run up against.

The NASH QUAD is not a speedy truck—you can't get forty miles per hour out of it but you can get your load where you

Be Pretty! Turn Gray Hair Dark

Look young! Nobody can tell if you use Grandmother's simple recipe
Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage
Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

STRICKEN BY DEATH AT GRANDSON'S HOME

Burial was made Thursday afternoon, Oct. 2nd, at the Goss cemetery, of Mrs. Elizabeth Goss, of Osceola Mills, whose death occurred at Wallacetown early Tuesday morning. Services over the body were held in the Ohio United Brethren church, and were in charge of the pastor, Rev. Hummel, who was assisted by Rev. Gordon H. Williams, pastor of the Methodist church at Osceola Mills.

Mrs. Goss, who made her home with her son, Howard, at Osceola, had gone on a visit to the home of another son, Harry, at Woodland, and later went to see her grandson, Willard Goss, at Wallacetown. While at the latter's residence Friday evening she was stricken with paralysis, death resulting the following Tuesday morning.

The deceased was born October 2, 1842, and was therefore aged 75 years, 11 months and 27 days. She was a daughter of Daniel and Eliza (Baughman) Phillips, both well known residents of Clearfield county, the latter dying only a few years ago at the age of 90 years. Her husband, Jacob Goss, died April 21, 1903.

Seven children survive, viz: Howard and W. H., of Osceola; Albert and Mrs. Hugh Kline, of Clearfield; Charles, of Faunce; Harry, of Woodland, and Dayton, of Blue Ball. Two sisters and two brothers also survive, viz: Mrs. J. M. Chase, Clearfield; Mrs. R. A. Goss, Pittsburgh; James Phillips, Clearfield, and John Phillips, Tyone.

Mrs. Goss was a good neighbor and friend, respected and esteemed by all. Her sons and daughters and brothers and sisters have the sympathy of all in their sorrow over her death.

By GLADYS

Mrs. Adams' visit to the home of her son, Howard, at Osceola, was opened quickly and in a few minutes she was in the room. "I'm here at last," Mrs. Adams glanced at her watch. "I was calling on you."

"Why, mother, I am a girl," she threw back her curls, laughed merrily. "Won't you be able to tell us twins apart?" "I thought by the way you always comes in like a s gun. Where have you got?" "Down by the river."

"Well," said Mrs. Adams, "X. Emery has just been here and invited both of you girls to her musicale next Wednesday evening."

"She said it was going to be just grand. Professor West, who has just returned from France, is going to sing. He is Sergeant West now, you know."

"You said she invited us both?" Vivian gasped.

"Yes, dear, and I am afraid you will have a hard time deciding," her mother answered.

"There's nothing to decide. It's Virginia's turn. I went to the musicale last month, you know. Oh, how I wish we had more than one best dress!" she exclaimed passionately.

It was not until Wednesday morning that Vivian appeared to cheer up somewhat. She had a consultation with her mother, who interrupted her by exclaiming, "It will never do. Of course there's no harm in it, but if you get into any trouble, don't blame anyone but yourself."

"No one will ever know about it," responded Vivian confidently.

"I'll go down to the village now and call at Mrs. Blake's. I know she will be willing."

Mrs. Blake lived across from Miss Emery's, and she received Vivian cordially.

That evening, Virginia, in her pink silk muslin that belonged to her and her sister jointly, went timidly up the path leading to the Emery home, feeling very happy.

Miss Emery, in beautiful brocaded silk, was passing through the hall when Virginia was shown in by the butler.

"Which one is it?" she asked. "I'm sorry you both couldn't have come," Virginia was placed where she could see everyone who played or sang. Then she gave herself up to enjoyment. She watched Sergeant West eagerly. It was only in dreams that she had ever heard such tones.

Sergeant West saw her and met the vivid glance of her eyes.

He turned to his hostess and said, "Can that young lady sing?"

"Indeed she can," answered Miss Emery proudly.

The next moment Virginia felt a hand on her shoulder. She looked anxiously into Sergeant West's face. "Will you sing for me?" he asked.

"I will play for you and you may sing what you please. Are you willing?"

"I'll try," she answered shyly.

It was nearly an hour later that Sergeant West again remembered the girl.

"I want you to sing once more," he said. "I have a plan. You have a voice, and with teaching, you could become a singer. Perhaps I can arrange to give you a couple of hours each week."

"I'm afraid I am a bit timid," said the girl, "but since you ask me I will try."

He was sorry for her as she stood by the piano. Her face was very white, and her lips almost stiff.

"Have courage," said the singer. "You did so well before."

The accompaniment began; but when an untutored, but rich contralto voice commenced the song there was a sudden discord among the keys of the piano, and Sergeant West wheeled about and stared at the trembling girl beside him. "What does it mean?" cried the artist.

"It cannot be possible that this girl has two distinct singing voices, one very high and the other very low."

The girl at whom everyone was now looking, tried twice to speak before she could say a word. Then she stammered, "I—I am the other twin if you please, sir."

"You are not the one that sang first?" he asked.

"No, sir, that was my sister, Virginia. It was her turn with our dress—"

Vivian stammered, then was silent. One half-hour before, Virginia had slipped out unobserved and met her sister at Mrs. Blake's. In their hurry in exchanging gowns, Virginia had not told her sister she had been obliged to sing.

The next morning Sergeant West returned to New York. While he was waiting for his train, he saw two girls in plain gingham gowns, hurrying down the road. It was Virginia that spoke for both.

"Sergeant West, we could not help coming to see you off—and to thank you."

Happiness shone in two pairs of eyes when he answered, "I shall not forget the lessons I am to give you when I return next month."

UNAWARE

By AGNES G. BROGAN.

Barris sat before a confusing litter of papers, and passed his hand in troubled fashion over his forehead.

Allan Barris was a play-writer, as well as manager of various departments connected with that work. His ambition was to present a new and truly great actress in one of his original plays. That desire gave no promise of fulfillment. Matter-of-fact affairs continually claimed his time.

Here, among the litter, were pitiful letters, begging work of almost every kind—those of confident would-be "stars" he found it necessary to ignore. The city seemed to be filled with inexperienced girls certain of their own histrionic ability.

Here was one, from a young woman who had at first written in the enthusiasm of sure success, asking for a certain part in one of his prominent plays. "Though she was unfamiliar with theatrical work," she frankly confessed, "she knew that she could portray his character of 'Norman' faithfully." Her request for a personal interview and trial had been ignored.

The second letter which came from the aspirant was decidedly humbler; she would be glad of "a few speaking lines."

The next appeal was for an interview only, and the last, which claimed Allan Barris' amused attention, was for office work of any kind which he could give her. She had suffered "strange misfortune," she wrote, and her need was great.

The appeal touched him, not so much by its pathos as by its cheerful persistence. He wrote the girl, asking her to call upon the following day, and he had almost forgotten his indulgence when she was announced.

In his mind, Barris pictured his frank applicant as a glowing creature garbed in popularly approved fashion. Instead, it was a small gray-clad figure which awaited obediently his invitation from the doorway. The gray dress was softly clinging, with a quaint kerchief about her shoulders, and it was the girl's shy, gleaming purple eyes which first impressed him.

She had spoken adventurously, she was "musically good looking"—"musical" was the word.

"Can you do stenography and typewriting?" he asked.

The girl sadly shook her head. "If you could give me other things at first, I would learn that later," she spoke in a sort of soft eagerness.

"Heretofore, I had no opportunity of learning. My life was all ease." She caught her breath tremulously and threw out her hands in a hopeless gesture. The wistful eyes were misty with tears.

"Everything changed for me in one moment. That was the strange, hard part of it."

Quickly she brushed the tears from her eyes and leaned toward Barris.

"Can you believe me," she asked, "that I have now between five and six hundred dollars?"

At his astonished stare, she smiled suddenly, very bravely, Barris thought.

"If you will give me some work to do at once that part of the trouble will soon be disposed of," she told him.

The busy man, whose sympathy and anxiety were usually bound up in his own intricate work, found himself moved now as he had never been moved to pity and admiration. The girl's shyness could not be doubted; her plucky willingness to work herself out of a discouraging situation won him immediate championship.

"You might begin," he suggested, "by answering that irritating telephone; use your judgment as to whether response upon my part is imperative, or may be postponed. I'm maddeningly busy."

The girl, her hat swiftly removed, was already at the telephone.

Barris noted approvingly the soft arrangement of her hair, in keeping some way with the trim gray frock and serious eyes. For a time he was not disturbed by the telephone, continuing his dictation to an observant young woman typist. Subconsciously, at last, he sensed the stranger's troubled gaze in his direction. Surely, she seemed to be signaling his help.

Barris abruptly dismissed his stenographer and turned to answer the girl's silent appeal. Her eyes, as he looked down upon her, were darkly tragic.

"I must go," she said, breathlessly. "I must leave you; and, oh, I did so want to stay—my first chance—and the evening end for money—" Her voice broke in its despair.

Again Barris was moved, deeply; the secret, the mystery of her unluckily crippled him.

"Explain yourself," he said tersely. "Are you, after all, an impostor, or an innocent mistakenly enduring some trouble?"

He was surprised at his own emotions.

"I ask, because I honestly wish to help you," he added gently.

The little gray figure came close. The girl held out imploring hands. Two purple eyes came a laughing gleam of triumph.

"Thanks," she said. "Your own belief in my acting is the surest proof of my success. I tell you that I could do it. For the past hour I have been your 'Norman'; and you have forgotten her in me."

And so it happened that Allen Barris realized his dream, presenting a new and truly great actress in one of his original plays.

Miss Margaret Gilliland left last evening to spend the week end with friends in Mutha Furnace.

WHAT GIRLS CAN BE

Interior Decorator

By Elizabeth Mator

There are plenty of professions today in which a girl can compete with her brother; how much more tempting is one in which she can outshine him.

From the time she rearranges her doll house until she decorates her room at college, she is expressing her inborn love for art and beauty. She is developing skill in interior decorating.

But a love for beauty is not all that is needed. A successful professional interior decorator must also have unusual good taste, and this good taste must be improved and made effective by proper training.

Such training can be had by securing employment in an interior decorator's studio at a small salary and gradually working up to a good position. If she can afford, however, to attend a school of art for two or three years, the possibility of opening a private studio and making a name for herself are unlimited. There are hundreds of towns and cities, especially smaller ones, where such a studio would thrive.

There are a number of well known and established schools, such as the New York School of Fine Arts with branches in both New York City and Chicago; the Chicago School of Art and Design, Chicago; the Pratt Institute in Brooklyn. Ask a public librarian to help find the names and addresses of others, and to recommend good books and magazines on the subject. Some of the newer big encyclopedias have excellent long articles under the heading "Interior Decorating."

Like architecture, interior decorating suffered during the war, but with the increase in building the opportunities will be limitless. Private homes, apartments, hotels, churches, hospitals, churches and office buildings, all must be decorated. Modern architecture lays more stress on interior decorating than ever before.

Fees are substantial. Before the war a woman had succeeded which brought them annual incomes of $1000. And in this splendid reward should be added the joy that comes from work which is a true delight.

If Kidneys Act
Bad Take Salts

Says Backache is a sign you have been eating too much meat, which forms uric acid.

When you wake up with backache and dull aching in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood, and they become sort of paralyzed and boggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clear you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's uric acid waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sears, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, chills often get sore, water seals and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithium and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize acid in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

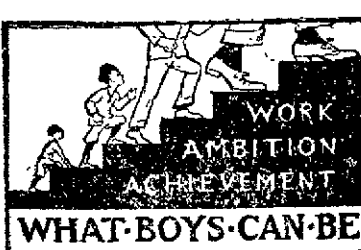

Jad Salts—a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delicious effervescent lithium-water drink.

WHAT BOYS CAN BE

The Aeronautical Engineer

By R. S. Alexander

What the automobile industry was twenty years ago, the aeronautical industry is right now. It is just starting. There are opportunities for boys with loyalty and persistence to go into it, stick with it, develop it, and later reap the rewards of its growth.

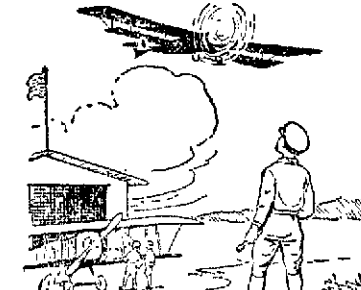

No boy should consider the work unless he has considerable mechanical ability to start with. An airplane is a very delicate piece of machinery.

There are several ways of getting into aviation. One is to start in an airplane factory. Here a young man learns about the mechanism of the airplane—knowledge that is of great value when he takes up outdoor work later on. Another way to start is to enlist in the United States Army Service for three years. Here training is given, not only in the construction and care of planes, but in the flying also. A third way is to go to a school of aviation. Many of the better technical schools now have such branches.

The aeronautical engineer is the mechanical engineer of the business. He improves planes, designs new ones, directs the manufacture, and in general is the brains of the business. Only a few can ever be great aeronautical engineers, but thousands can find positions in aviation.

There are three main lines of work. First there is the manufacturing, which is much like work in any other big factory. Then there is the work of the ground men, the garage men who man the hangers and take care of the machines. Finally there is the thrilling work of the air pilot. More and more pilots will be needed as planes are more and more used for carrying mail and passengers.

For further information as to the opportunities open in aviation write to the Aero Club of America, 297 Madison Avenue, New York City; to the Aerial Club, 230 Madison Avenue, New York City; or to the Aero Club of Illinois, 430 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago. For good books on the subject write to the Aeronautical Library, 297 Madison Avenue, New York City. Good periodicals are "Aerial Age," Madison Avenue at 40th, New York City; and "Aviation," 22 East 17th Street, New York City.

Mr. Leedom, in addition to his duties as Deputy Fire Marshal, also serves as County Commissioner of Elk County. He is an A. ALL SIGNS MUST BE REMOVED FROM PUBLIC HIGHWAYS

HARRISBURG, Oct. 3.—Candidates for office in the coming election will save money if they will refrain from placing announcement cards on telegraph or telephone poles or elsewhere within the legal limits of State Highways, the State Highway Department announced today.

During the last week in various portions of Pennsylvania, but particularly in the northwestern counties, candidates for office have been placing the Highways with announcement cards of their candidacies. The result has not added to the natural beauty of the thoroughfares. The Department several weeks ago issued an order directing that no advertising matter of any nature be permitted to remain within the legal limits of the road. Should the Department decide to proceed against persons who violate this law, a fine could be imposed for the placing of every one of the offender's cards or advertising material found on the roadway.

COURT NOTES

Gorgeous Evening Gowns and Others

Western News (per Union)

Heavy satin cloth of silver and rich tulle are the materials that are in demand for formal evening gowns. These materials are gorgeous in themselves and therefore adapted to the present styles in evening dress which depend upon graceful draping of the fabric and not upon embellishments for interest. It is beauty of fabric and beauty of lines that must hold the attention.

Sometimes, in the simpler models, the drapery suggests the use and flowing lines of the classic Greek garments and sometimes a single piece of material appears to be wrapped about the figure, with a long loose end forming a train. But an artist in draping may use material more freely than is indicated in either of these styles so long as he knows how to use drapery to glorify the figure. The corse is usually plain and flat at the front and held in place by thin shoulder straps. It follows the lines of the corset, figure very closely here and does not concern itself with covering much of the back. Gowns of this kind cut in step length or a little shorter in back shades or jade green and in the regulation evening shades worn with satin slippers and silk hose to match, are likely to outshine any rivals.

The draped satin gown in the picture is one of those in which the material seems to be wrapped about the figure and to end in a short train. It is of white satin with a drapery of tulle on one shoulder that falls almost to the ankles from the other shoulder. Strands of beads fall in long loops and there is a trailing spray of silver roses at the back to finish up the splendor.

The pretty dress of turquoise colorette crepe shown in company with this gorgeous evening gown does not aspire to rival it. Yet it might appear at the same function and prove as pleasing. Not every woman can carry off an emerald and fuchsia dress so changed that it may be said to have no longer much use for it. The simpler, fine-lined things suit them better so they choose that which fits person and do not attempt to play a role that does not please them.

WOMAN'S CLUB MEMBERS TO RECEIVE WAR MEDALS

The meeting of the Woman's Club at the home of Mrs. Philip Reed Thursday evening was well attended and was unusually interesting, as plans for very important social welfare work were discussed, and decided upon, which it carried out will greatly benefit the whole community.

We say "if carried out" for the success of any uplift movement depends largely upon co-operation, and the Woman's Club needs the co-operation of the leading citizens in order that the efforts they are making for the betterment of the community be successful.

The Club has done much work that is commendable in the past, and especially during the war.

Recently the president, Mrs. Boulton, was informed that in recognition of their work in the last Liberty Loan drive the members on the committee during the drive are to receive war medals.

The Liberty bonds bought by the club, being all paid for but $10.00, the club voted to pay that amount out of the balance in the treasury, which Mrs. Roy Fulton, treasurer, reported to be $10.46.

Mrs. George Reed told about the unsuccessful efforts on the part of several members to secure a district nurse. As this is one of the most vital questions with which the club has to deal, a district nurse being so necessary to the welfare of the community, the club has appointed an other committee and will renew their efforts to secure the nurse.

In view of the fact that the influenza epidemic is again predicted it will enter Southland College surely behooves the citizens of town to co-operate with the Woman's Club and the physicians to secure the district nurse, and thus help to safeguard the town in case of all epidemic.

Mrs. R. V. Esterline, a prominent member of several charitable organizations who was a visitor at the club, gave a very graphic account of the splendid work done by the various public nurses in Altoona.

Mrs. Giffert's report on the work done by the Tuberculosis Committee was one that should make Clearfield proud of her Woman's Club.

Nine tuberculosis sufferers were sent to sanitariums in August, clothing and railroad transportation being provided.

This committee needs a lot more help (in the way of clothing and money) than they are getting. Money is needed to provide milk and eggs for those who are too ill to be taken away.

Another fine thing to the credit of the Woman's Club is the "buying" of a French war orphan. Mrs. Philip Reed who has charge of this work, reports 28 orphans "old" and only one left to be "adopted." Only $85.50 will keep one of these little waifs for one year.

A very clever little play was given following the business session. Those taking part were Mrs. Boulton, Mrs. Striver, Mrs. Leonard, Mrs. Stauffer, Misses Isabelle Powell and Betty Weaver.

Mrs. Boulton and Mrs. Zerfos are delegates to the State Federation.

Miss Joseph Banta left this morning for Sutherland, Fla. where she

In this case, A. F. Wentover prosecuted Mr. Lewis Tubbs for cruel treatment toward the child which she had taken to raise. Col. Bill Fairman appeared for the prosecutor, and W. A. Hager for the defense. The result was a pretty fier/ trial and some fun for the spectators, but the facts favored the prosecution, and a verdict of guilty was rendered. A case which grew out of a fight at a ball game between Philipsburg and Morrisdale, on August 14th, was taken up before Judge Whitehead this morning. In this case, F. C. Croyle, of Philipsburg, is prosecuting David Bailey, of Morrisdale, for assault and battery. The testimony developed that a dispute arose over a decision of the umpire in the game, and almost precipitated a general fight. Bailey was a special officer while Croyle says he occupied the position of innocent bystander. At the climax of the altercation, it is said Bailey landed a right swing to the prosecutor's eye, and the basis of the prosecution was formed. The prosecution is represented by Miller and Hartwick, while A. H. Woodward and Walter Welch are defending Mr. Bailey. The defendant was found guilty.

The jury in the case of Walter Johnson, the DuBois young marionette man who was charged with felonious rape by Miss Olin Corp. of near Rockton, was found guilty, the jury making its return just before 6 o'clock last evening. The jurors spent almost four hours upon the case before they were able to make up their minds. Johnson's attorneys, Messrs. Gleason and Brockbank attempted to acquit the defendant by establishing an alibi but were unable to convince the jury as to the whereabouts of their man from 2 to 4 o'clock of the day upon which the crime was committed.

There have been more criminal cases tried at this term of court than at any previous criminal court in the county's history. Yesterday afternoon we had the unusual spectacle of four juries working at one time and the judges and district attorney were hard put to find jurors.
